SOLID SERVICE

PHOTOGRAPHY SARAH TACOMA

THE PLACE: Just outside of Hanover, a tree-lined driveway leads to The Old Barn. Under its roof is a full-service custom stone countertop business run by Reay and Courtney Hunter. Reay's father Ted started the business. After working with Ted over 10 years, Reay and Courtney bought the business and continue to offer the excellent craftsmanship and customer satisfaction The Old Barn is well known for in the region.

THE STYLE: The showroom has an extensive section of quartz samples from Hanstone, Caesarstone and Silestone that offer various price points for customers. Because quartz is a man-made product, the small samples reflect exactly what a large surface will look like. For granite, you have to head out to the slab yard. Since Granite is a natural product, you have to look at each individual slab to see the variances in the stone. The selection is impressive, so be prepared to spend some time wandering and dreaming. Also available are stainless steel kitchen sinks, porcelain vanity sinks and a selection of faucets.

THE PROCESS: They do it all at The Old Barn, from a laser template of your countertop project that ensures an accurate fit, to the fabrication and installation. This level of service offers peace of mind, so all you have to do is pick the stone you want, get a laser template, then wait for the delivery and installation of your new beautiful stone countertop.

WHAT'S HOT: The artistry involved in making the countertops also extends to custom stone designs. Some of the custom pieces they have worked on include tables, fireplaces, lights, charcuterie boards and even crock weights. So if you have a project that requires stone, come and talk to Reay and Courtney.
