Neighbours remark that they didn't even know there was a house behind all the trees. When Mary Lawson, Vice President and General Manager at Dalerose Homes started uncovering a house she bought last fall, people marvelled at what had been hidden for so many years. Continued on page 54

The new kitchen is bright, understated and elegant; stainless appliances and an overhead stainless light add to the clean look.

Originally built in 1885 and renovated several times with a variety of iterations of the original layout, Lawson sought to revive the neglected space and give it new life for new owners.

In the yard, she did her best to preserve quality trees, particularly the birches, and allow the light into the house and let it breathe. It is a beautiful downtown lot in old Orangeville. Sunshine Design and Construction took care of tree removal and the rebuilding of walkways and decking to improve access and drainage. Lawson had the exterior bricks repaired and repointed and much of the board and batten siding was replaced. But that was just the beginning; the home was just as neglected and outdated inside as it was on the outside.

"My realtor called me one day and said, 'all it needs is lipstick and rouge.' Well, let me tell you, it was mighty expensive lipstick and rouge!" laughs Lawson. Nonetheless, she could see the potential and was glad Sheila Mullin, her Royal LePage RCR Realty, Brokerage realtor, had brought it to her attention.

"I dragged all my trades through before I bought it, but of course there were still surprises," says Lawson. She expected nothing less from such an old home and was prepared for some challenges – and says it was all worth it in the end. In fact, she has fallen in love with the home. "We took it all apart and put it all back together and now I'm thrilled with the finished product," she says.

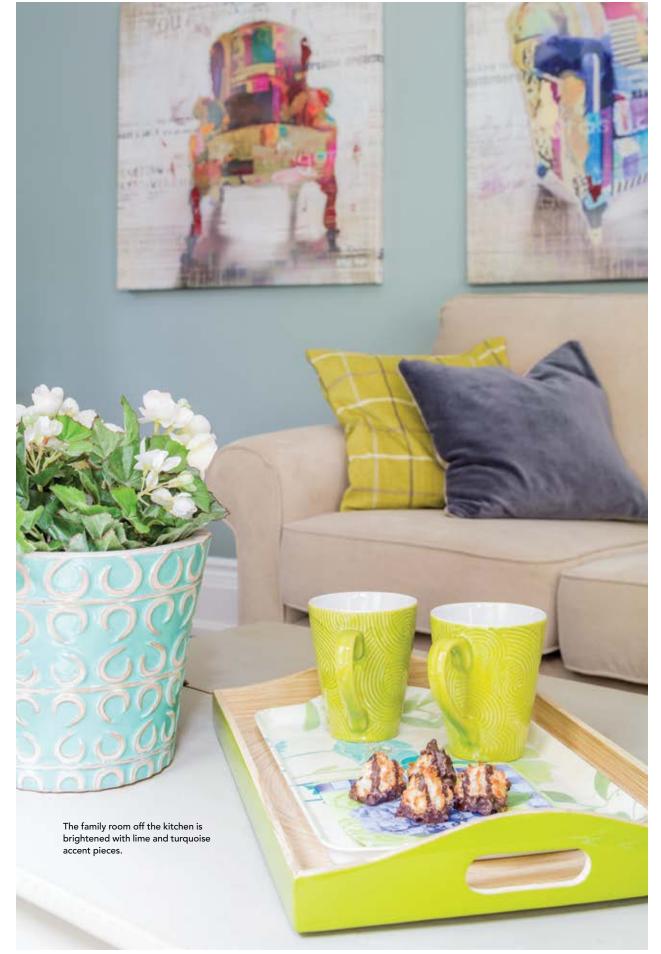

Inside, Lawson says it was important to open up the front entry and make it inviting. As you enter the generous foyer with an original chandelier overhead, you are treated to the view of the staircase leading to the second floor. Looking straight ahead, there is also a generouslysized library with built-in shelving that could double as a guest room. Continued on page 57

In the living room, the fireplace proved to be a challenge. Although it had been wood-burning, Lawson hoped to install a gas fireplace but went with electric in the end. The original marble fireplace seemed small for the room so she added a ceiling-height surround for grandeur.

To create consistency in the main level flooring, Lawson had some original flooring sanded and stained to match the engineered hardwood in the same tone across the balance of the main floor. Similarly, she restored or rebuilt the wide baseboards and trim and added slate tile in the entry areas and crown moulding through most of the home.

Old wooden shutters were repaired and re-installed, as they were in good condition and suited the home perfectly. New windows and new garden doors by Golden Windows were added and thermo panes were replaced by Dufferin Glass.

In the dining room, Lawson kept the original chandelier and added new black shades. Where new light fixtures were needed, she turned to LITES in Guelph to find suitable styles.

At the top of the stairs, is an open area that feels like a sunroom, perfect for curling up with a book. The transformation of the second floor included a new full bathroom next to the spacious second bedroom. Continued on page 58

Boldly-coloured accents brighten up the main floor family room. French doors lead to a pergola-covered patio. ABOVE: The generously-sized library with built-in shelving could double as a guest room.

Lawson transformed the master bedroom into a true suite. It has a large bay window, built-in armoires and a window bench. It now easily accommodates a king-size bed. The spacious new en suite has a clawfoot tub by MAAX, a huge shower and his-and-hers quartz top vanities.

The biggest changes came downstairs in the kitchen and family area. "I knew what I wanted to create in the kitchen but it was a challenge," says Lawson. "I needed to change the closed internal kitchen into a space that was open to the family room and would suit a more current lifestyle."

Paragon Kitchens designed a galleystyle kitchen with a corner sink with a view to the yard, tall cabinets and lots of pot drawers, pantry cabinets and an adjoining butler's pantry. The cabinets are pale grey maple and the countertops are quartz. Pot lights and under-cabinet lighting and stainless-steel appliances complete a space that would make a chef smile. The kitchen is now open to the family room and patio, where Lawson installed a new pergola.

Finally, it was important to fit a powder room and main-floor laundry close to the kitchen. The former laundry had been on the second floor and was shared with an adjoining apartment. This space became the new second bathroom.

Lawson used a mix of new and old furniture and accessories to stage the home for sale. Some of the pieces are family heirlooms, used by multiple generations, which fit the elegance of the home. "It feels French to me, not Victorian," says Lawson of the style. Some pieces of artwork are originals by her brother. Dalerose Homes is the successful partnership of President Ted Bryk and Vice-President and General Manager Mary Lawson, both of whom have extensive experience in the home-building industry. They have both held prestigious seats on local and national association boards, including the Canadian Home Builders' Association and BILD (Toronto Home Builder's Association). They offer fully-custom homes to their clients, whether they are renovations, such as this downtown home, or brand new builds, and they pride themselves on their close relationships with their buyers, suppliers and trades.

This home is now for sale. For more information, please contact Dalerose Homes or Sheila Mullen at Royal LePage. OH

The upstairs hallway is the perfect place to escape for an afternoon nap. Original stairs add character to the landing and lead to an attic used for storage.
